

STUDY UNIT LIMIT

The number of units of credit for full-time status is 12 or more per semester. On average, a student should expect to spend three hours per week in class and study for each unit of college credit. Students enrolling in 15-16 units are, therefore, usually committing themselves to more 40 hours per week of study.

The maximum number of unit credits a student may register for is 18 units. Anyone wishing to enroll for more than the maximum per semester must petition for exception with the Dean of Student Services prior to adding the classes. However, prior to filing a petition of exception, a student should meet with a counselor to verify the advisability of enrolling in additional units. Petitions must be filed with the Admissions Center prior to the deadline to add classes.
