Gonfalon Flags

A gonfalon is a medieval banner originally used by 11th and 12th century Italian city-states. Later, gonfalons were adopted by Italian guilds, corporations and sub-districts. Gonfalons often include badges or coat of arms. Gonfalons are used in ceremonies at the University of Chicago, Rowan University, Rutgers University, Princeton University, the University of Toronto, the University of St. Thomas, and now, Southwestern College.

The gonfalons displayed today represent each of the college’s six schools and the three Higher Education Centers.

Reading of the Roster
Academic Costume

Traditions of academic costume began in medieval Europe. When students in the universities of Paris, Bologna, Oxford and Cambridge began to organize into guilds, they developed distinctive costumes for bachelors (apprentices), masters (teachers) and doctors (teachers who had completed postgraduate study).

American use has been standardized by an intercollegiate code, which takes the Oxford costume as a starting point. The bachelor’s gown has long, pointed sleeves, and the master’s gown oblong sleeves, open at the wrist. Both are untrimmed. The doctor’s gown has round, open sleeves, with three bars of velvet and velvet facing. The gown is normally black but some institutions have adopted colored gowns.

The academic hood also found its beginnings in the unheated medieval classrooms of England. Its original purpose was as a head covering to provide warmth before it was replaced by the mortarboard. The hood is now worn around the neck and down the back and indicates both the degree held and the institution from which it was granted. All hoods are black and lined in satin with the color(s) of the institution that conferred the wearer’s degree. The color of the velvet trimming on the hood represents the field in which the degree was granted. The style of the hood varies with the degree level.

Herman Baca is considered the founder of the Chicano Movement in San Diego County.

From his humble Aztec Printing shop in National City—where he printed quinceañera invitations and posters for the Sweetwater High School homecoming dance—Baca provided a space for the disenfranchised to find their voice.

Baca said that when he graduated high school, there were few options for him. So he got married and held down three jobs. Baca said college wasn’t for him, but he loved reading the news magazines. His friends who had gone off to college would come hang out with him at the print shop.

“A printing press attracts politically active people,” Baca said, adding that there were many heated discussions around that printing press.

Inspired by the speakers at a local Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlan (MEChA) conference, he helped start the local Mexican American Political Association (MAPA). His goal was to get fellow Mexican-Americans registered to vote. Over the years, his advocacy brought to light sexual and physical violence against migrants, exclusionary practices of Mexican-Americans from K-12 Gifted and Talented Education (GATE) programs and the use of force by law enforcement in communities of color.

Baca led protests in 1972 against an order by the San Diego Sheriff's Department for cab drivers to report any passengers they “felt” might be undocumented. In 1977, Baca and his Committee on Chicano Rights (CCR) gained national prominence when he stood face-to-face with Ku Klux Klansmen who traveled to San Ysidro to “assist” the Border Patrol in apprehending migrants. Four years later, he and the CCR held a conference with many of the 1,000-plus activists who had participated in the National Chicano Immigration Conference of 1980. Survivors of the brutality and abusive immigration policies spoke at the conference—giving a human face to the suffering at the border.

In 1983, Baca led what was—at the time—the largest civil rights march in San Diego County. His 17-mile Walk for Rights started in Chicano Park and wound its way down to San Ysidro. Baca was at the front of what he called “this wonderful great brown snake” because it picked up marchers all along the way.

Now retired, Baca was honored in 2004 when the University of California, San Diego asked him to house his archives. His collection of meticulously bound documents and 4,500 photos was the first major Chicano collection acquired by the university.

For his meritorious contributions to the improvement of civic and social services and human relations, the Southwestern College Governing Board grants Herman Baca a Southwestern College honorary degree.

Starla Lewis is an educator who teaches that love is the most powerful force in the universe. Unconditional love is a foundation that she learned from her mother—a teen mom who was married to her father for 38 years.

Born in segregated Missouri, Lewis was heavily influenced by her parents, grandparents and Great, Great Aunt Kate. She spent her formative years living with her parents and grandparents. When she was four years old, her parents moved to California for better job opportunities. They allowed her to continue living in Missouri with her grandparents.

Lewis’ Great, Great Aunt Kate also lived with her and her grandparents. Born in 1880, her Great, Great Aunt Kate was Lewis’ best friend. Lewis credits her with giving her the tools to deal with racism. She remembers Aunt Kate saying that some people will be mean to you because of hatred, but most would be mean because of ignorance in not knowing who you are.

That attitude helped Lewis to not take things personally, and she wears that attitude like armor to this day. That attitude allowed her to feel like she belonged anywhere she wanted to be.

Between ages four and nine, Lewis lived every other year in Missouri and in California. When she was nine, her family bought a home in the all-white community of Altadena. Because her father was mixed race, the progressive neighbors “gave them a chance” to live there.

So at nine, Lewis desegregated her California school. Armed with the unconditional love her mother taught her, Lewis made friends easily at her new school. She learned that good things always came from something perceived as bad. She says that people often dwell in the negative of a situation. But Lewis believes where you put your focus is what you will attract.

“My whole focus is love,” Lewis said. “I think it’s the most powerful force in universe and the most ignored. It’s not soft, it’s transformational. We can address every issue in our life from that space.”

An educator who began her career at Palomar College, Lewis is a published author who now teaches at Mesa College and San Diego State University. She, her daughter and granddaughter authored the book: “I am: My Own Self Validation,” a title that came from her Aunt Kate. Lewis also created a coloring book, named “Sunkisses” that shows the diversity of people throughout the world.

For her meritorious contributions to the improvement of civic and social services and human relations, the Southwestern College Governing Board grants Starla Lewis a Southwestern College honorary degree.
