Putting Your Completed Action Steps into Program Review

The program review process relies on you to provide a status update on past actions steps (aka goals) from past program review cycles. Rather than use one of your ten action steps in your program review to document this, you can use the "Annual Program Review snapshot Form for Completed and Discontinued action Steps" to document those action steps you're no longer pursuing because they are no longer needed or have been completed. Save and Resume!

The new snapshot allows collaborators to work on the form at separate times and then save their work. However, remember every time a contributor saves their work a new hyperlink is generated that must be shared with collaborators. Always use the most recent hyperlink to resume working on the form.
